

Anna, project manager at Alma Folkhögskola

How do you define peer-to-peer-education and learning?

A democratic and practical learning method individuals to individuals

What are your experiences with p2p education?

I have experience as a participant, teacher, strategic planner and observer. It is a great method as everyone is included and it strengthens not only the knowledge of a new subject, but also the self-confidence. It is short sessions which make it easy to attend and you are concentrated all the time.

What would you say is the biggest benefit/advantage of p2p-education?

Everyone can perform it

What are the limits of p2p-education?

Not widely recognised as a method

What, in your opinion, are the requirements of individual learners and teachers for p2p-education and learning to be successful? (this question is focused on what the facilitators, teachers and enablers of p2p-education need to make p2p-learning processes possible)

Open mind, willing to learn and be involved in the process, you need to share ideas and opinions. A democratic sphere.